Joe Biden Has a ‘Transfusion Team,’ and Wall Street Is Excited

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—A world conclave of champion people-eaters, united by the objectives of taxing carbon, eliminating fossil fuels and reducing the human population, began a gala “Green Horizon Summit” today under the leadership of HRH Charles, Prince of Wales, British central bankers Mark Carney and Andrew Bailey, and Wall Street-London billionaire Sir Mike

Bloomberg. So lavishly did Bloomberg's money overflow the campaigns of Joe Biden and Congressional Democrats this year, that this three-day City of London summit can mark the formation of the "Biden Transfusion Team."

And Wall Street went wild with enthusiasm, accelerating the market's recent rise to roughly 1,000 points Monday; as Biden again spoke publicly of a "dark winter" with COVID shutdowns, traders saw visions of more quantitative easing following from the Federal Reserve. The market has risen more than 2,000 points since the media began claiming that Biden was getting elected President.

This summit sponsored and hosted by the City of London, the square mile conclave of medieval banking guilds under the lord high Bank of England, is the most elaborate central bankers' festival thus far in "the Great Reset" This is the latest name, made up by the World Economic Forum and IMF Managing Director Kristalina Georgieva, for what Prince Charles and his pal Mark Carney have been pushing for a decade: Having a combine of central banks and the biggest private banks enforce the sacrifice of economies and people to "save the planet." Believing sovereign governments are now exhausted and broken by the COVID pandemic and its shutdowns, they are casting central bank dictatorship and forced divestment from advanced energy and agriculture, as "green finance," "the Great Reset" or even—for the deplorables of the working classes—"Build Back Better" after the pandemic.

Speaking on just the first day of the "Green Horizon Summit" were Prince Charles; Mark Carney; Carney's successor at the Bank of England Andrew Bailey; Larry Fink of BlackRock LLP; David Blood of the Blood and Gore hedge fund with Al Gore; European Central Bank (ECB) President Christine Lagarde; Georgieva from the IMF; UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres; several British ministers; Dame Elizabeth Corley of the Impact Investing Institute; Christiana Figueres, Global Optimism, former Executive Secretary of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) from 2010 to 2016—i.e., the Paris Agreement; and Dr. Ma Jun Member, Member of the Monetary Policy Committee of the People's Bank of China, who has some explaining to do as to why he's still part of this sacrifice and depopulation cabal. Ma has been the third man with Carney and Bloomberg in the leading task forces of central bank "green finance" since 2014.

Chief "Davos Man" Klaus Schwab keynotes Tuesday; Bloomberg Wednesday.

The central bank cabal took aim at both private finance and government debt. Prince Charles' bosom pal Carney, now the UN Special Envoy on Climate Action and Finance, and with Financial Stability Board and World Economic Forum positions, announced a private finance "initiative" to "make every finance decision take climate change into account." The British Chancellor of the Exchequer Rishi Sunak said the U.K. is building a "green sovereign yield curve" so that every sovereign bond would pay a higher rate if not for economic sacrifice or "green technology" purposes; Sunak said large companies and financial services must report their impact on climate by 2025, and the central banks and BlackRock LLP would do it for them as well, according to Carney and Bloomberg's Task Force on Climate-Related Financial Disclosures.

And on and on: Banks will now get "climate stress tests," said BOE governor Bailey; Georgieva enthused that "To win the fight against climate change, we also must harness the power of the financial sector." ECB president Lagarde declaimed that "The economic challenges of the climate transition are phenomenal," but undoubtedly these challenges are for other people's economic circumstances, not her own. They loved taxing carbon. And they loved Joe Biden. Mike Bloomberg's special advisor Mary Shapiro, former chair of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said the difference Biden would make "for climate" would be "extraordinary" and that a Biden Administration would "only be a positive for the future of financial reporting on climate risk."

There is only one major national leader who has stood firmly and publicly between his nation's economy, and this juggernaut of central bankers and Wall Street-City of London billionaires. They coerce governments and companies to sacrifice industries, modern technologies and populations, “for the planet,” while they build the new green bubble, the “Great Reset.” That one leader is President Donald Trump. It hasn’t only been Sir Mike Bloomberg among this collection of elite bloodsuckers who have been sworn to take Trump down. It’s the whole “Biden Transfusion Team” of them. If you don’t look forward to a 14th-century future of windmills and dirt farming without livestock, hope that Trump wins his battle against election theft, and work for it.

UNITED STATES POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC

Flynn’s Lawyer Sidney Powell Hammers ‘Hammer’ and ‘Scorecard’ Election Fraud Software

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—Sidney Powell, Esq., Lt. Gen. Michael Flynn’s defense attorney, and Tom Fitton, president of Judicial Watch, appeared on Fox Business with Lou Dobbs on Nov. 6—where Powell revealed a secret computer program, designed in the National Security Agency, which needs there to be no more than 3% discrepancy in votes between the candidates. The Fox program was in turn reported in the New York Post Nov. 9.

Powell said Federal authorities needed to investigate the likelihood that 3% of the election voting ballots that were collected digitally were intercepted and changed, using what National Security Agency whistleblower J. Kirk Wiebe called the “Hammer” information technology capability, and a follow-on software application called “Scorecard.” This use could have resulted, Wiebe said, in a vote shift in votes to Joe Biden anywhere in the country.

Both Hammer and Scorecard had just been described by Wiebe on LaRouchePAC’s “Fireside Chat” on Nov. 5. Hammer collects the total vote for a candidate digitally, and then an application called Scorecard is run when the discrepancy is no more than 3% of the count, which it intercepts in transfer to election boards, “adjusts” that 3% of the votes, and returns it to the transfer medium. In Michigan, for example, a computer “glitch” resulted in a change of votes across a county of about 5,500 for President Trump, discovered thus far in just one of 47 districts. In other states hundreds of thousands of votes mysteriously appear for Biden, which is statistically impossible, Powell stated.

“This has got to be investigated, she said. It has been used against other entities in other countries. ... Somebody has gone into the system. I think [these programs] were very broadly used, not by the vote counters, but by the Democratic operatives that had access to these programs through the government access points they had. It’s got to be investigated by the President’s most trusted military intelligence officials who can get into the system and see what was done. What’s been used in other countries, has now turned against our own system.” (Wiebe had specified that the NSA programs were designed for other uses, abroad, and now likely applied to elections here.) “There is no reason to think the Democratic operatives who put us through Russiagate, the Steele Dossier, tried an impeachment hoax, a special counsel, would not create every means of voter fraud they could come up with to steal this election”, said Powell. “That is exactly what happened.”

COLLAPSING WESTERN FINANCIAL SYSTEM

‘Finance in Common’ Summit Seeks To Cut Global Development

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—In a clear attempt to cinch the imperial knot and cut off all remaining avenues of finance to all “unsustainable” development efforts, a four-day meeting starts today with the odd title “Finance in Common.” The summit is an attempt by imperial forces to unify all 450 (by their count) “public development banks” under the green finance umbrella, with its restrictive environmentalist sustainable goals as criteria for rejection of any but the greenest of investments.

Some 140 major financial firms have already limited their investments in the oil and gas sector, according to the advocacy group the Institute for Energy Economics and Financial Analysis.

Co-organized by the International Development Finance Club and the Islamic Development Bank, the lead speaker (of literally dozens) is Timothy Adams, President and CEO Institute of International Finance, itself representing over 500 “global financial institutions,” followed by Masood Ahmed, president of the Center for Global Development, an organization committed to meeting the Paris Climate Accords and which claims to have “changed the conversation” on China’s development financing, introducing the concept of the “debt trap” in 2018.

Turkish Finance Minister Hands in His Resignation

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—Turkish Finance Minister Berat Albayrak, who is also the son-in-law of Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, announced his resignation, in the wake of Erdogan’s dumping of the central bank governor on Nov. 7 and replacing him with a flunky, former Finance Minister Naci Agbal, without informing his Finance Minister Albayrak beforehand. Albayrak, 42, claimed, “After serving in ministerial posts for nearly five years, I took the decision not to continue my duty, due to health issues,” Albayrak posted in a statement on Instagram. He also said he intends to spend more time with his family, whom he said he “neglected.” He has deleted his Twitter account.

Since last week Turkey’s lira has been continually sliding downward, and Erdogan has continued to pressure the central bank to lower interest rates, a move that would only further that slide.

Erdogan has not yet accepted Albayrak’s resignation, nor are the press widely reporting the move, which has, however has caused considerable confusion, indicating the growing instability of Turkey’s political situation. The opposition newspaper Cumhuriyet wrote that Erdogan himself had asked Albayrak to resign because of pressure from the Nationalist Movement Party, the coalition partner of Erdogan’s Justice and Development Party (AKP), without which Erdogan would lose his parliamentary majority.

Erdogan continues to pursue military operations in Syria, and adventures in which he is openly supporting the Azerbaijan government in its conflict against Nagorno-Karabakh, including transferring terrorists from Syria to this new conflict zone. At the same time Turkey's economy is nosediving, with high inflation, high unemployment, and a potential foreign debt crisis.

COVID-19 AND FAMINE

Warp Speed Gift! Pfizer Says COVID Vaccine 90% Effective in Phase 3 Trial Analysis, and So Is Sputnik V

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—The pharmaceutical manufacturer Pfizer, which is currently in the lead to produce a vaccine for COVID-19, has announced that its vaccine is over 90% effective in preventing the infection. One headline called the event “a great day for science and mankind,” and it is the gift of the Warp Speed vaccine-development “crash program” of President Donald Trump.

Russian Health Ministry research institute director Oksana Drapkina then said of the Sputnik V vaccine, already being administered to target populations in Russia, “Based on our observations, it is also more than 90%. The appearance of another effective vaccine—this is good news for everyone.”

An interim analysis of data from the ongoing Phase 3 trial of Pfizer mRNA vaccine reviewed the experience so far. The test population is 44,000 participants, half getting the vaccine and half getting a placebo salt-water shot. So far there have been 94 cases of COVID-19 in this entire 44,000 population, with fewer than 9 of these in the vaccinated half of the participants, and 86 in the placebo group. The head of Pfizer's vaccine research and development, Kathrin Jansen, told the Washington Post, “I would say it's an historical moment. Something like this has never happened before. First of all, the world was faced with such a terrible situation, the pandemic, and being able in such a short time to go through what usually takes many years.” The interim results were analyzed by an independent committee, which found no serious safety concerns.

The number of positives in a vaccine Phase 3 trial needed to show statistical efficacy is usually in the range of 160 cases. However, statistical significance tests can show efficacy at lower numbers of total positives if there is a dramatic difference between the two populations. In the case of the Pfizer vaccine, the difference in positives is so dramatic that efficacy could be strongly supported at a lower number of total positives. This means that it is highly likely that more than a month ago, in early October, there would have been sufficient evidence of efficacy for an emergency approval.

Regarding safety, there were no significant safety concerns as of early October, after thousands of study participants had been vaccinated and observed for 1 month or more. Given the extreme urgency of getting a vaccine to the most vulnerable sections of the population, such as nursing home residents, an emergency use authorization would have been justified in early October regarding safety concerns, accompanied by an advisory to use in the most vulnerable populations first. It is a scandal that this early-use authorization process was held up by FDA's vaccine program head, Peter Marks, with an arbitrary safety observation period that happened to stretch two weeks past the presidential election. Dr. Marks is head of the Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research at the Food and Drug Administration.

The Pfizer vaccine uses a new technology, messenger RNA, which contains the genetic code for the virus spike protein. The mRNA is encapsulated in very small lipid particles, and is injected into the subject. The mRNA enters the subject's cells, and codes for the production of the virus spike protein, which then stimulates an immune reaction. There is no virus in the vaccine. Another company, Moderna, has developed this technology over the past 10 years, and is also in Phase 3 testing. The advantages of an mRNA vaccine include that a live virus containment lab is not necessary. The same delivery system can be used for other mRNA vaccines or therapies which require only a change in the mRNA code, and because production is done entirely in the test tube, the process can be easily scaled up as needed.

STRATEGIC WAR DANGER

U.K. Chief of Defense Staff Warns of New World War by Miscalculation

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—The U.K.'s Chief of the Defense Staff Gen. Sir Nick Carter warned of the danger of a Third World War by miscalculation, in an interview with Sky News on the occasion of Remembrance Day on Nov. 11, which commemorates the end of World War I. In the U.S., it is known as Armistice Day.

Carter said that the global economic meltdown caused by the COVID-19 pandemic may lead new to security threats which, in turn, may spark a new world war.

Carter said people across the globe are “living at a moment in time where the world is a very uncertain and anxious place,” and that he thinks “the real risk we have, with quite a lot of regional conflicts that are going on at the moment, is you could see escalation lead to miscalculation, and that is a thing I think we have to guard against.” When asked to describe what he meant about an escalation, he said that it means more people and weaponry “perhaps get involved, and before you can contain it, it leads the sides ending up in a full-blown war.”

He referred to the fact that escalation was underway before both world wars and that it resulted in a “miscalculation which ultimately led to war at a scale we would hopefully never see again.” When asked whether he means that the threat of a Third World War is real, Carter replied, “I am saying it’s a risk, and I think we need to be conscious of those risks.”

Carter told Sky News the importance of remembering those who gave their lives in wartime, because “if you forget about the horror of war then the great risk I think is that people might think going to war is a reasonable thing to do.”

The list of flashpoints Carter might be referring to has been getting longer by the day.

German Politician Willy Wimmer Affirms Biden Presidency Means New Wars for the U.S.

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—Willy Wimmer, a former member of the German Bundestag and former State Secretary of the Defense Ministry, and former vice president of the OSCE, told RT in an interview published Nov. 8 that there is a “good chance” that the U.S. will return to a policy of foreign wars under Joe Biden, which will make its reconciliation with the EU impossible. President Donald Trump kept his promise and didn’t start any new foreign conflicts, but that may well change if a Democrat is in the White House, he stated. Wimmer recalled the NATO bombing of Serbia under Bill Clinton and pointed out that “in the presidency of [Barack] Obama, Biden was vice president and he was in absolute accordance with Obama’s drone wars and the wars in the Middle East; therefore there’s a good chance that Joe Biden continues in the same way as the Democratic Party did it in the 1990s and under Obama” before 2016. “And going back to before 2016 means going back to war” for the U.S., Wimmer said.

On the U.S. election, he said “It’s quite unusual... that the result of an election is announced by a news agency or a news channel. We’re used ... in all our countries which belong to the OSCE, that we have election committees who announce results. And this hasn’t been done yet in the U.S.” He described the events surrounding the American election as “unbelievable.”

SCIENCE AND INFRASTRUCTURE

Trump Years Have Seen Notable March of Small Modular Nuclear Reactors in Many Nations

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—During the past several years the number of companies and host countries driving designs for a new generation of small modular nuclear reactors (SMRs) through development and toward approval, has grown rapidly. The push has been strong in the United States during the Trump Administration, and one result is that the Oregon company NuScale has gone through to regulatory approval and a first-of-a-kind commercial contract for a small (60 MW module, factory-produced) reactor. Others are now marching fast.

- A consortium led by Rolls-Royce and Exelon Generation (which operates 21 full-size reactors in the United States) is developing a U.K. SMR. Rolls-Royce will factory-produce the nuclear modules and components for assembly inside a weatherproof canopy on the power station site. This avoids costly schedule disruptions. Rolls-Royce has also made a contract for SMR development with CEZ Group, which owns and operates the Czech Republic's six commercial power reactors.
- Thirteen SMR designs are in the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission Vendor Design Review process as of October 2020, and eleven are advanced designs that will generate high heat as well as electric power. NeutronBytes blog wrote Nov. 3, "developers of small modular reactors based on Generation 4 designs ... offer heat as the primary output of their plants. Heat can be used to generate electricity, but it can also be used for process heat for industry, especially for manufacturing steel, cement, chemicals, the production of hydrogen, and seawater desalination." This means estimated reactor outlet temperatures over 500° C (nearly 950° F). Canada's Strategic Innovation Fund is backing one of these designs, the Integral Molten Salt Reactor (IMSR) power plant of Terrestrial Energy.
- Rosatom is planning a land-based SMR for the eastern Republic of Yakutia (Sakha), in addition to its floating nuclear reactor, of which the Akademik Lomonosov is already delivering power in the town of Pevek in the Chukotka region of the Russian Far East. The land-based SMR uses Rosatom's own technology. And a small pressurized-water reactor based on the same "RITM" technology, an advanced pressurized water reactor unit, already powers new-generation icebreakers.

Under President Donald Trump, the Department of Energy and Nuclear Regulatory Commission consistently pushed strengthening the U.S. nuclear fuel cycle and preparing for a widespread development and deployment of advanced nuclear fission, and then fusion reactor designs, including the NuScale breakthrough. The Trump Administration, through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, took notable steps to address grid security and reliability, including cybersecurity and supply chains.

THE NEW GLOBAL ECONOMIC ORDER

China and Russia Will Wait for Official Results in U.S. Election

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—There has yet to be a congratulatory message to Biden from Moscow or Beijing, and both countries appear to be waiting for the official confirmation of the election.

The Kremlin today said, “The current [U.S.] president has announced certain legal procedures. This is what makes the situation different. Therefore, we believe it’s right to wait for the official results of the elections to be announced.” Spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters: “We hope that it will be possible to build dialogue with the next U.S. President and agree on ways to improve bilateral relations. Particularly because an important field of bilateral relations, the security and stability field, concerns not only our two nations but in fact all nations in the world.” However, he continued, “Anticipating your possible question about congratulations from [Russian President Vladimir] Putin to the U.S. President-elect, I want to say the following: We consider it correct to wait for the official results of the elections to be announced.”

China has also not released a statement. According to South China Morning Post, Editor in Chief of Global Times Hu Xijin said in a video that China had not congratulated Biden on the election in order to maintain distance from the race and U.S. politics. He wrote on Weibo: “This will be the most turbulent and uncertain transition period in the United States... China must be prepared.” He wrote on Twitter this morning: “China hasn’t congratulated Biden on his victory as quickly as Western countries did. I think it’s because China needs to keep larger distance from the US presidential election to avoid getting entangled in its controversy. This actually shows that China respects the US as a whole”

Mexican President Reiterates, the U.S. Election Has Not Been Decided Yet

Nov. 9 (EIRNS)—Hammered by Mexican media and corrupt ancien régime politicians for refusing to recognize Joe Biden as president-elect, President Andrés Manuel López Obrador restated at his press conference this morning that he will not recognize a winner in the U.S. elections until the vote counting in the states is concluded, legal challenges resolved, and the result decided by the appropriate U.S. election officials.

I am not saying that there was fraud or not in the U.S. election; that is not for us to decide, López Obrador specified. But in our case, he continued, in 2006, there was fraud; and it was all set up for the congratulations to flood in for our opponent. The President likewise suggested that people refresh their memories of the 2016 U.S. election. “Four years ago there was a great pile-on on behalf of Mrs. Clinton,” not only by the Mexican media, but from the Mexican government itself, he said, citing hysterical cries by “the idol of the technocrats and neo-liberals” who then headed Mexico’s central bank, Augustin Carstens, that a Trump victory would be “a Category 5 hurricane.”

AMLO pointed to the lesson of Bolivia, whose people just overturned the brutal “color revolution” run against Evo Morales’s government: “Why not wait? ... This business of our issuing judgment, is as if we were electoral judges, when our Constitution establishes that we should be respectful and not intervene until the Americans resolve their affairs. And there is no reason for worry. The people are intelligent. Look what happened a year ago in Bolivia. The situation was extremely grave in Bolivia. It was thought that democratic life would not be re-established, even that violence would be unleashed, and I celebrate that yesterday President Arce was sworn in after a democratic election, and they resolved their difference peacefully. So, why such anxiety? Such desperation?”

The Mexican President made clear his government expects to get along with whoever wins the U.S. Presidency, because his government is not “servile” and will defend his nation’s sovereignty. “We have a very good relationship with the government of President Trump, because there has been a relationship of respect, of non-intervention,” he said, and added he had no problem with Mr. Biden or the Democrats.

But when asked by a reporter if he was worried about a Democratic win, given that deportations of Mexican immigrants were much greater under Barack Obama, López Obrador delivered a sharp warning: “There won’t be any problem, because we have already defined a policy of respect. We would not permit, for sure, the introduction of weapons which President Calderón [2006-2012] allowed under [the Obama regime’s] Fast and Furious secret operation. But I am sure that they are not even going to dare, if Mr. Biden should be given the victory, to propose that to me.... So there is not going to be any problem.”
